BONUS BILL WILL BE PASSED FIRST

Tax Reduction Plan May Be Modified as a Result.

SENATOR WATSON'S POSITION

Leader of Senate Republicans Declares There Must Be Money in Treasury to Pay Bonus—Would Hold Tax Reduction Bill in Committee Unless There is Certainty It Can Be Passed.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Secretary Mellon's plan for tax reduction was given partial indorsement by Senator Watson of Indiana, a member of the finance committee and acknowledged leader of the regular Republican group in the senate.

Senator Watson said he would support the Mellon plan on general terms, but if modification in the tax reduction program are necessary in order to take care of the adjusted compensation to soldiers, he will insist upon having such modifications made. He said:

"The bonus bill will be passed first, so we might as well proceed on the theory that whatever reduction may be made in the volume of the payments must be made on the basis that the bonus shall be paid, and that there must be money in the treasury to pay it. The bonus would not cost more than $80,000,000 the first year, and in modifying the Mellon plan we should not suggest reducing the taxes to such a point that the money for the bonus will not be on hand."

Senator Watson declared that as a member of the finance committee he will refuse to vote the tax reduction bill out of the committee unless there is an absolute certainty that it can be passed. He said if there exists the prospect that the bill will be buffeted around the senate and prevented from passage until late in the summer of next year, he will insist upon having it held in the committee.

A statement issued by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, held that the Democratic minority is anxious to have taxes reduced, if it can be done without creating a deficit. He declared, however, the Democrats will not support any plan to cut the taxes and reject the soldier bonus, adding:

"If the administration commits itself to the policy that the maintenance of the present so-called nuisance taxes and rates on earned incomes is indispensable and unavoidable should the bonus bill be passed, little will be accomplished in the way of tax reductions. The expenses incident to adjusted compensation for the former service men may be borne by a bond issue. The bonus question should be promptly disposed of; it has been delayed too long already."

Senator Robinson said that along with a judicious revision of income tax rates there should be a general revision of tariff rates.

MAY PARDON CRAIG

President Has the Power, the Department of Justice Holds.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The department of justice handed President Coolidge a formal ruling declaring that the president has the power to pardon Comptroller Charles L. Craig of New York, under sentence to serve 60 days in jail for contempt of court.

The opinion was written by Solicitor General Beck, who was called into a conference by President Coolidge just before Senator Copeland and Representative La Guardia put before him a formal request to extend executive clemency to the New York official. There is a distinction between a "request" and an "application," it was pointed out.

One point raised by the president on which he asked the opinion is whether he can pardon a person who has not requested clemency. While it is understood that Mr. Beck found that the president had wide latitude and could extend clemency if he so desired, the president does not wish to interfere unless Craig, or some one, authorized to act for him, files a formal application.

Anti-Klan Bill's Status.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 27.—The Monk amendment, providing for a filing of the names of officers and custodians of membership rolls of secret organizations, withstood the efforts of legislators. It remained intact for further consideration after the vote to strike it off stood 17 to 17. In the senate it found a defender in Mrs. Mooney, the only woman member of the upper house.

EXAMINERS WANTED

To Probe Tax Duplicates in School Districts Asking State Aid.

Columbus, Nov. 27.—The state tax commission has adopted a resolution asking the directors of finance to furnish the commission with a sufficient number of examiners to determine whether the property of 667 school districts in Ohio is assessed at a reasonable proportion of its value. This action is in conformity to a law enacted by the last general assembly providing that such an investigation be made at the request of the director of education to determine whether the property within a school district asking state aid is on the duplicate at a reasonable proportion of its value. The districts concerned are located in 67 counties.

NEW YORK POLICE GRILL SUSPECTS

Claim They Plotted Murder of Bank Messengers.

New York, Nov. 27.—After putting Morris Barlow Diamond through an exhaustive examination, the police declared that Diamond, his brother Joseph and a number of their associates in the Diamond Box company were nothing more than a "corporation for the promotion of thievery, dope smuggling, rum running and sundry other crimes."

And it was this corporation, the police charge, that plotted and executed the murder of the two West End bank messengers here on Nov. 14 last.

Joseph Diamond has been put under arrest and William Fried, an employee of the box company, detained as a material witness. All deny knowledge of the bank messengers' murder. But police declare that finger prints found on the Cadillac car in which the slayers made their escape and finger prints taken of Morris Diamond when he was arrested once for gun toting, were identical. For Morris Diamond, before his arrest in Cleveland, had figured several times in police records.

The finger prints in fact were the clues which started Detectives Donahue and Martin on Morris Diamond's trail. This led them first to Philadelphia, where Diamond has entertained chorus girls on a lavish scale. From there the trail took them into the state of Ohio and to the Statler hotel in Cleveland.

Dope Peddlers and Bootleggers Busy.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 27.—Recent deaths due to poison liquor and drug store robberies for narcotics caused local and federal authorities to unite in a war on bootleggers and dope peddlers. Pre-holiday demand is blamed for the suddenly increased activity of bootleggers and the consequent flooding of the market with dangerous liquor, which has killed seven here and six in Philadelphia in the last few days. The state police will probably be used to break up the rum ring in the state.

Two Killed by Autos.

Cleveland, Nov. 27.—Robert Jenkins, a deaf mute, was run down in front of his home when he attempted to cross the street to join playmates. Harry Linkenstein, 27, died from a broken neck a few hours after his automobile crashed into another car in Fairview village.

NEW PACT WITH CANADA SOUGHT

Would Stop Liquor Smuggling Along the Border.

CONFERENCE ON AT OTTAWA

United States to Ask That Suspected Smugglers Be Subject to Search and Seizure and That Violators Be Subject to Extradition—Twelve-Mile Treaty Held to Be in Effect by Officials.

Washington, Nov. 27.—A Canadian-American treaty to stop liquor smuggling along the international boundary will be sought by the United States delegation to the conference between representatives of the two governments, which meets at Ottawa today.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Moss, head of the American delegation, has arrived at Ottawa, carrying with him the outline of the proposed agreement.

The United States will ask that Canada refuse clearance papers to liquor laden vessels leaving for American ports, that suspected smugglers operating on the Great Lakes be subject to search and seizure, and that persons charged with violating liquor laws be subject to extradition.

In return, the United States is willing to offer Canada a treaty agreement permitting the Canadian authorities to transport liquors across Alaska to the Klondike country.

The United States also will ask that the Canadian authorities report all shipments of liquor destined for the United States by automobile or airplane. No vessels of less than 250 tons would be allowed to clear Canadian ports with liquor cargoes for any destination whatever, under another American proposal. Mr. Moss expects the conference to reach an agreement.

The so-called 12-mile treaty with the British government, permitting search and seizure of rum ships outside the three-mile zone, is in effect operative today, it was stated at the treasury department. It was in view of this agreement, treasury officials explained, that coast guard cutters ventured outside the three-mile limit Sunday and seized the British rum runner Tomaka, when those on board the vessel believed her to be safe from the arm of United States law.

The United States and the British governments have come to an accord on the terms of the rum running treaty, and it was with this distinct understanding that a radio was sent to coast guard cutters to stop the Tomaka anywhere found, it was declared. There will be no protest from the British government because of the incident, British officials declared, because the two governments are so confident the treaty will be ratified they are acting upon the verbal understandings.

WHEELER REPLIES

Says That Congressman Tinkham's Charges Are Groundless.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Congressman Tinkham's latest charges and drive against the Anti-Saloon league are false and groundless, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the dries, declared here.

"The proposal of the tinkering congressman to take the league apart and see how it works will not impress the American people until they are convinced that he is inspired by a desire to promote the public welfare, instead of that of the liquor interests," he declared.

Mr. Wheeler added that the visit of former Representative Volstead to Europe was by appointment of the president and not at the expense of the Anti-Saloon league. In conclusion, he declared that his organization is the only national body that has complied with federal statutes regarding election activities.

Review of Craig Case Urged.

New York, Nov. 27.—The board of estimate of New York city drew up and approved a memorial to President Coolidge urging that he review the case of Comptroller Charles L. Craig. The memorial will be handed to the president by Acting Mayor Murray Hulbert, who will probably be accompanied to Washington by associate members of the board. The memorial declares that the 60-day sentence imposed on the comptroller is not only a great personal injustice to a man who has not been guilty of an act of moral turpitude, but may be a serious embarrassment to New York's million dollar a day government.

The Ohio potato and apple crops also are of the bumper variety. The potato crop is estimated at 12,348,000 bushels, as against 11,214,000 bushels last year. The apple crop is estimated at 12,395,000 bushels, as against 7,298,000 bushels last year.

Officers Find Dynamite.

Stuebenville, O., Nov. 27.—With the discovery of 60 sticks of dynamite and the arrest of four foreigners, county authorities believe they are near a solution of the dynamiting of the home of Deputy Marshal Charles Pearce at Smithfield several months ago. The dynamite was found in a hay loft at the farm of Joe Rossi near Farlett, this county. The arrest of the four men soon followed.

Tortured by Moonshiners.

Toledo, Nov. 27.—Mike Szparagowski was kidnapped from his home here by two armed men who hurried Szparagowski across the Michigan state line and tortured him. The men, alleged moonshiners, claimed a still belonging to them had been stolen and blamed Szparagowski, who was hung up by his thumbs. The victim denied the charge.

Burglar Escapes.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 27.—When she arose from bed to get a pistol, after hearing a noise in her room, Mrs. Mary McGinnis stepped on a burglar, who was crawling on all fours into the room. The thief made a dash for the stairs, lost his footing, tumbled to the bottom and made his escape through an open kitchen window.

Loses $2,000 and Car.

Findlay, O., Nov. 27.—Two thousand dollars and a new auto was what it cost Luther Smeltzer of Chillicothe, O., for transporting liquor. A companion, Joseph Ehrler, also of Chillicothe, pleaded not guilty and his hearing was set for Dec. 4. About $1,000 worth of liquor was seized in Smeltzer's car.

$100,000 Fire on Farm.

Springfield, O., Nov. 27.—Fire starting in six different buildings on farms owned by Thomas Mattinson, one mile west of South Charleston, caused damage estimated at $100,000. Twelve buildings, including four barns, were destroyed. Mr. Mattinson says he believes the fires were of incendiary origin.

Kerosene Explodes.

Willard, O., Nov. 27.—Ethel Cole, 19, was burned to death and her parents and her sister, Lucy, 14, were badly burned in an attempt to rescue Ethel in their farm home near Celeryville. Ethel attempted to start a fire with a can of kerosene and it exploded. The house was burned to the ground.

Train Hits Bus.

Cincinnati, Nov. 27.—Fred Rahe, 53, and McClellan Griffin, 20, were killed and three others injured when a work train hit a Sharonville bus at Lockland, near here. Noise made by the engine in the bus is believed to have drowned out the sound of the warning bell at the crossing.

Shot by Hunting Companion.

Coshocton, Nov. 27.—Roland Phillips, 18, son of Isa Phillips, Orange, died here from injuries suffered when he was struck in the abdomen by shot from a gun in the hands of Floyd Gardner, a hunting companion.

ADJOURN TO STUDY SUGGESTIONS

Governors Would Have Pennsylvania "Clean Up."

RAP ANTHRACITE INDUSTRY

Assert It Should Be Declared a Public Business and Regulated by Pennsylvania Laws—Anthracite Coal Tax Denounced as an Indefensible Levy—Governor Pinchot Makes Reply.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 27.—After three hours of criticism of the anthracite industry and the failure of Pennsylvania to adopt measures to control prices, the conference of governors, called by Governor Pinchot, adjourned until Dec. 13 to study suggestions presented during the session.

Two governors, George Silzer of New Jersey and J. A. O. Preus of Minnesota, with representatives of nine other states, took part in a severe arraignment of Pennsylvania's attitude in the anthracite problem. A suggestion for a "compact of states" by Governor Pinchot as a method to get united action to prevent extortion in the sale of anthracite was opposed by a number of representatives, and resolutions presented by Governor Silzer endorsing repeal of the anthracite coal tax and other laws which he declared obnoxious, failed of endorsement when the representatives of governors not present refused to vote until the suggestions made at the conference could be laid before their executives.

Governor Pinchot asked the cooperation of the other states. He said he did not see why Pennsylvania, which consumes one-tenth of the anthracite mined within its borders, should attempt to regulate the industry for the other nine-tenths of consumers of other states.

Governor Preus insisted that the anthracite industry should be declared a public business and regulated by Pennsylvania laws. He cited cases of control of elevators in Minnesota, North Dakota and other western states. He said regulation was an obligation on the people of Pennsylvania to take care of the rest of the anthracite using public.

Governor Silzer said he was opposed to the compact of states unless it were empowered to "come into Pennsylvania and clean up." He styled the tax an "indefensible levy," and insisted that the tax levies a toll of from 50 cents to $1 a ton instead of only a cent on a dollar, as Governor Pinchot stated.

States represented were Ohio, Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Minnesota, Maryland, Rhode Island, Virginia, Michigan and New York.

DEATH TOLL CUT

Modern Mine Construction Saves Lives of 1,000 Workers.

Benton, Ill., Nov. 27.—Modern mine construction cut down the toll of life, which otherwise would have been frightful, to a minimum, when an explosion threatened 1,100 miners underground in the Orient mine here. This was the verdict of engineers following the check up of the casualties, two dead and 13 injured, which at first it was believed would mount into hundreds.

The Orient, the largest soft coal mine in the world, it was pointed out, was equipped with modern barrier pillars, which halted the spread of the flames and localized them immediately after the blast. The barriers, like the fire walls in storehouses, extend from the entrances underground and separate the entire mine area into numerous small sections. In the Orient mine the barriers are 50 feet thick.

RECEIVES WOMEN

Coolidge May Not Refer to World Court in His Message.

Washington, Nov. 27.—President Coolidge indicated to a delegation of women that he considers the world court of international justice already before the United States senate and will not refer to it in his message to congress. Headed by Mrs. Raymond Morgan, a special committee representing 11 women's organizations, urged him to make his recommendation to congress in the very strongest terms. He declined to commit himself except to say that he appreciated their interest and that the matter in which they are interested already is in the hands of the persons who will necessarily have the right to approve or disapprove.

HAS EBERT'S BACKING

Chancellor Albert Destined to Become Dictator of Germany.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—Dr. Heinrich F. Albert is scheduled to become the new dictator of Germany.

The executive powers of the republic which President Ebert transferred to General Von Seeckt during the Hitler-Ludendorff putsch will be taken from the commander of the reichswehr and given to the new chancellor. The purpose is to replace rule by "generals" with a civilian dictatorship to conciliate the Socialists, who overthrew the Stresemann government when it failed to end military rule.

President Ebert is determined to stick by Dr. Albert in spite of the general rejection of Albert as chancellor by the parties in the reichstag. The president is said to have drafted a decree dissolving the reichstag if it rejects Albert as chancellor.

Watson Not "Stalking Horse."

Washington, Nov. 27.—As a "favorite son" candidate for the presidency, Senator James E. Watson of Indiana declared himself completely out of it. He asserted he has no intention of being a "stalking horse" for any other candidate seeking the nomination. If he gets into the race at all it will be for himself and for no one else. Furthermore, he will not decide whether or not to cast his hat into the ring until after he has looked long and carefully over the field and has convinced himself that he has a "fair" chance for the Republican nomination.

Navy to Meet Bears.

Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 27.—Formally inviting the University of California football eleven to meet the Navy squad here on New Year's day, an official invitation was sent by President W. F. Crelter of the Tournament of Roses association to Luther Nichols, graduate manager of the university.

VERA CRUZ SEIZED?

Armed Agrarians Reported to Have Caused Reign of Terror.

Mexico City, Nov. 27.—Disorder has broken out on the lower east coast of Mexico and agrarians, uniformed as federal troops, have entered the port of Vera Cruz and taken charge, according to a report here. The report declares that terror reigns throughout the city's streets as a result of killing and looting by the agrarians who, after gaining possession of the town, shouted "Long live Calles, the next president." One detachment of the agrarian mob is said to have arrested prominent citizens, placed them in a wooden shack and set fire to it, the victims managing to escape by digging under the floor before being consumed by the flames.

Georgian Gets Decision.

Boston, Nov. 27.—Young Stribling, the Georgia phenomenon, won every session of a 10-round bout with Joe Egan of Boston here last night. Egan refused to make a battle and his defensive skill kept the southern boy tied up throughout the bout. Stribling was the aggressor all the way.

Coats and Wraps Pretty and Warm

Favorite Winter Garments Are Built for Style and Service.

An arctic winter is headed this way. The news is in the very air—not because the weather man has confided the prophecy, but because a glorious season of fashions in furs has opened. Dress authorities say there has never been a time in all their experience when furs alone had such a vogue and literally dominated the entire category of styles.

Always, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, a woman who went in for good clothes had a fur coat in her winter layout. It was the one note of indulgence in her wardrobe; her pride, and the envy of her less fortunate friends. If her estate chanced to be one of affluence, the coat was sable—the last word in luxury—for sable, like rubies, has ever had high value.

The possessor of a sealskin coat was once regarded as a person of rank in the world of fashion. One fur wrap was thought, in days past, to be a sufficient blessing for any one person, and not so long ago the shopkeeper who offered fur garments to his rich customers had often to employ all of his salesmanship to persuade them to buy fur instead of cloth for outer wraps.

The automobile changed all that, for fur motor coats became a necessity. Driving in the open, it was impossible to keep warm in anything but furs, and the motor salesman became, quite unconsciously, an ally of the dealer in furs. Enveloping wraps and ankle-length coats of the heavier furs were built in modish models and the vogue was established. All of the coarser varieties of fur were used for those first utility wraps—raccoon, opossum, coney, ringtail, civet cat—with the inevitable result that these came into prominence and their prices soared.

Beauty and style were not especially considered. Women who drove about in the earlier fur wraps looked not unlike frontiersmen dressed in buffalo and bear skins. They offered a great contrast with the slender silhouette.

Craze for Furs.

Now that there is a craze for furs, a woman who goes to buy her winter outfit selects as many fur wraps as formerly she bought coats of cloth and velvet and brocades. She finds need for a long coat for street and carriage wear—the carriage now being a limousine. This coat may be of sealskin, caracul, broadtail, squirrel or any one of several novelty furs and fur fabrics combined with real fur. Mink is, of course, more costly, but is popular for fair weather service and dressy daytime occasions. It is suitable also for informal evening wear, for no chance of fashion has ever affected the dignity and solid value of mink.

This fur belongs to a woman of position in the social world. Her grandmother was proud to own a mink cape or a half-length dolman. The woman of today wears a mink coat, instep length, or a soft wrap that completely covers her. The cost of it would have dressed the lady of the dolman for a year. The affluent one wears Russian sable, not for the day only, but for all kinds of formal dress as well.

Ermine belongs traditionally to the trappings of royalty, and is ever a thing of beauty and refinement. As an entire garment it was not so popular formerly as now, made into gorgeous wraps and coats, long and short. The most exclusive models in ermine of Parisian origin are cut full, with wanton use of the fur. Some are the wide wrap-around garments. Some have a flaring flounce, are paneled or scalloped.

In a particularly gorgeous wrap of ermine a circular cape of the fur falls from the neck to a low waistline, richness upon richness. In another style of uncommon grace the upper part of the wrap is draped about the shoulders at one side, where the fur drops in a point and is finished with a long, heavy tassel of silk. In many of the new styles fur is draped as freely as if it were silk or any lighter material.

Ermine for Dress Occasions.

For the ball and dinner gown made of the lovely new fabrics in delicate shades, a wrap of ermine is the most suitable of all furs. But human fickleness that so easily transfers patronage has lost some of its passion for ermine as a dressy wrap, since the fur has been so generally used for more common wear in street coats, and so widely and cleverly imitated.

Ermine is essentially a fur for youth and the most engaging garments made of it are shown in the misses' and junior models. Some are long, to wear over the dainty dance frocks. Others, in the short jacquette style, have a decided cachet. One among the many charming samples of these little coats is made of black velvet and lined with ermine, a narrow band of the fur showing all around the edge, about the collar and the cuffs. The novel feature of this model is that it may be worn inside out, which the flapper finds amusing.

The jacquettes of ermine, mole, broadtail, caracul, in black, the natural cream shade, or taupe, the newest dye; and of nutria, rabbit or squirrel are tremendously popular for lunch at the restaurants and for other informal occasions. One sees really more of these than of the longer coats.

Sealskin has come back into its own and is more popular this season than it has been for many years. Not the same old coat in stereotyped model that endured so long, but new styles that have decided elegance. The very latest sealskin coat is made with no other fur and no trimmings, its skins are selected and the lines of the garment are quite new. Designers have shown the keenest interest in handling this fur and have presented several models of distinction.

One is a coat cut in straight lines from the throat to the instep, the general build of the garment being boxy, the sleeves straight and rather wide. A voluminous collar that crushes above the chin, and wide, slightly flaring cuffs are added. A dressier model in seal is cut after the plan of a cloth coat, the skirt in three tiers, being attached to the waist. One other is a loose wrap-around with wide sleeves and deep, soft collar. On this an ornament of bronze beads with two heavy tassels forms the clasp over one hip.

Self-Fur Collar and Cuffs.

Sealskin is so smooth and uniform that it works out with unusual success in the deep flounce model, one having a slightly flaring skirt that ripples all around, with self-fur collar and cuffs. Some especially handsome wraps in seal are trimmed with skunk and other furs, one model having a band of skunk around the bottom of the straight coat, extending in a narrowing strip up the front, ending low at the waist. Another sealskin has a cape of its own fur, a band of fox outlining the edge and forming the collar and cuffs; but this has an over-trimmed appearance and is less smart than the garments of all-seal.

A new favorite has been elected, and chinchilla is now the choice of all the furs for evening. It is not inexpensive, as everyone knows, and it is adaptable to the needs of any age. Chinchilla becomes a dowager as well as it does a debutante, though it must be said that its soft grays harmonize most happily with a rose-leaf complexion.

Chinchilla is compensating to the modiste, for it combines well with other furs. It makes the most stylish collars and cuffs, for example, on a coat of broadtail or caracul. As all-over garments most of the models in chinchilla are rather simple in line, because the fur itself is deep and the shadings in its color are very beautiful.

The fur neckpiece is no longer the piece de resistance in a fashionable toilet. As a protection, worn with a suit or a one-piece dress, it is almost indispensable, but as a fad it has passed and is now merely an article of utility.

Diseases of Cabbage Family Preventable

Bulletin Says Rotation of Crops Is Advisable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Practically all the crops which belong to the cabbage family, such as cauliflower, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, kohlrabi, collards, and kale, turnips, radishes and rape, are subject to the same diseases. Such diseases, says the United States Department of Agriculture, are preventable in the main by simple means of plant sanitation.

A new bulletin just issued by the department as Farmers' Bulletin 1351, Cabbage Diseases, treats of the spread of the various diseases and their control. Some of the more important cabbage diseases discussed in this bulletin are black-leg (foot-rot, wilt), soft rot, root-rot (wilt), downy mildew, white rust, drop (water soft-rot), spot diseases of cauliflower, black leaf-spot (black mold), ring-spot, powdery mildew, and damping-off.

Rotation of crops should be practiced, avoiding crops which belong to the cabbage family and other closely-related crops. Mustard and related weeds which harbor cabbage pests should be kept down. Drainage water and refuse from diseased cabbage fields will carry infection. So will stable manure with which diseased material has been mingled.

The seed bed is often the source of infection. The greatest pains should be taken to insure healthy plants. Locate the seed bed on new ground, if possible, or sterilize by steam the soil used. Clubroot is avoided by the free use of lime and by setting healthy plants. Disinfect all cabbage seed before planting, to prevent black-rot and black-leg. Yellows is due to a fungus which persists in the soil for many years. Varieties of cabbage resistant to this disease are available.

A copy of this bulletin may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Finds Beef Type Can Be

Good Milk Producer, Too

"It is possible for the beef type of shorthorn to be a heavy milk producer," says Dr. C. W. McCampbell, head of the animal husbandry department in the Kansas state agricultural college. "This was demonstrated by the department at the Sni-A-Bar farm belonging to the W. R. Nelson estate, near Kansas City."

"The show at the Sni-A-Bar farm was the first strictly shorthorn show in the United States. The best herds throughout the country were shown. One of the most interesting features was an exhibit of the heavy-milking, thick-fleshed shorthorns forming an experiment now being conducted by the animal husbandry department."

The chief purpose of this experiment referred to by Doctor McCampbell is to show that it is possible for the beef-type shorthorn to be a heavy milk producer. The cows in this experiment are giving from 1,000 to 1,500 gallons of milk a year and their calves are winning prizes at the international live stock shows each year.

Desirable All-Egg Meal

Developed in Ohio

A process has recently been developed by some poultrymen in Ohio, which may make a desirable feed by converting the by-product eggs from hatcheries into an all-egg meal for poultry feeding. According to these men, about half of all the eggs that go into hatcheries finally become a by-product from which little value has been realized. In fact, they say, many hatcheries are obliged to pay for the removal of this product. The process consists in passing the liquid eggs over a heated revolving drum, which cooks and dries the product. The new feed is said to be rich in protein, vitamins, fats and minerals, and in tests seem to be proving a good feed for growing chicks.

Watch Your Grading in

Offering Fruit for Sale

Grading laws in many states are making better returns possible for better growers. The public has confidence in a standard grade, and it is to the interests of farmers and fruit growers to maintain proper standards.

As a matter of self-protection any one offering fruit for sale must see to it that the fruit grades up to the label. When inspection shows otherwise things may be a little uncomfortable for the packer. If you are putting up "choice" stuff which is supposed to be sound, ripe, of one variety, of a certain size, free of dirt, insect, disease, or weather injury, see that the fruit is all of this, and more. A little extra quality has never been known to hurt the reputation of a man putting up a fruit pack.

Not Difficult to Wean

Colt by Proper Feeding

It is common practice to wean colts at from four to six months of age. If the colt has learned to eat grain, there should be no difficulty in the weaning process and it should not suffer any setback in its growth. Ground oats, bran and cornmeal, one-third of each by weight, to which is added a little oil meal make a good ration for the weaning. Provide good pasture and in the winter, clover or alfalfa hay. Be sure it has plenty of fresh water at all times.

Bought and Paid For.
Pedro, a Mexican, had been hired to drive a coal wagon in Los Angeles. He made the delivery all right, but after the wagon was empty he went into the kitchen, planted himself in a chair and refused to budge.
Finally the police were called and Pedro was taken to the station and his employer sent for.
"What's the idea?" demanded the coal dealer, "why didn't you come back after you delivered the coal?"
"I no know I can come back," wailed Pedro, "I thought I was sold with the coal; you weighed me with it, senor!"

Butterfly Perfume.
It has long been known that many butterflies and moths have scent glands that emit delicate and pleasing odors. A well known example here in America is that of the monarch butterfly.

A government naturalist describes the perfumes of some of the characteristic English butterflies, which he interestingly likens to the odors of well known English flowers. A distinctive and characteristic perfume is probably secreted by each species. That this is so is supported by the records that the males of the large garden white butterfly diffuse a faint but delicious scent of balsam or lemon, those of the small white Pieris rapae shed an aroma of thyme and from the green-veiled white Pieris napi there emanates a faint but delightfully odoriferous perfume resembling that of the lemon verbena. Other butterflies, according to their kind, diffuse other odors, as sweetbrier, honeysuckle and other choice perfumes, which are sometimes so strong as to be perceptible to the blunter senses of mankind.

Use Butterflies as Food
Butterflies, which are very prolific in Australia, are suffocated in millions by the aborigines and, separated from their wings, pressed into cakes and eaten.

FEW WILD TURKEYS LEFT IN AMERICA

Game Birds Almost Extirpated in the United States.

One of the most spectacular of all American birds is the wild turkey. It is distinctly an American product and is found in no other place but North America.

Woven in the clothing wrapped about mummied remains of cliff dwellers in Arizona and New Mexico are found the feathers of turkeys. There are other evidences in the caves showing that the birds were kept in a state of domestication by the aborigines. When early in the sixteenth century the Spanish conquerors invaded Mexico, they found turkeys that had been domesticated by the Indians. Some of these they took back with them to Spain, where it was found they would breed in captivity. Their descendants were removed to France and England, and later brought to the United States by settlers. This is the history of the common domestic turkey which people are wont to have on the table when celebrating Christmas or Thanksgiving day. A short time ago, as time goes, wild turkeys were to be met within almost any suitable locality southward from a line drawn through southern Maine, southern Ontario and South Dakota. All over the eastern United States they were abundant, as well as among the hills and canyons of Colorado and the semi-arid deserts of New Mexico. Every year one may find on some magazine cover the picture of an old Puritan father with his blunderbuss on one shoulder and a wild turkey on the other. Thus do our men of art keep before our attention one of the past glories of New England. Where on Cape Cod may one find a wild turkey today? Where may you seek for it in Rhode Island, New York, Iowa or Indiana, or in many other states of its former range? In a few isolated out-of-the-way parts of our country some of these wonderful birds still exist. Ten years ago I found a number in Lee county, Florida. But soon a thousand hunters were in the field after them and the turkeys are vanishing from south Florida. There are still some to be found about the great southern swamps, as, for example, in North and South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana, and one may see signs of the great turkey in southern Texas, but here chiefly on a few great ranches where hunting is restricted. As a game bird the wild turkey has practically ceased to function.—T. Gilbert Pearson in the World's Work.

CLASS COLORS

Juniors and Seniors Utilize Big Flag Staff at Court House.

The male members of the senior and junior classes are all askew oved their respective colors. Friday night the juniors ran their colors up on the court house flag staff. This was too much for the seniors and on Sunday night the colors of the juniors came down and seniors' colors waved all day Monday. To make sure that the seniors could not take down the junior pennant the cable was drawn thru the pulley and the coil was carried midway up the pole and tied to the flag staff. The venturesome climber then smeared the pole with axle grease on his way down to make sure that the pennant would remain.

The court house officials recently paid out twenty dollars to have the flag staff fitted up with a new cable and pulleys. Sheriff Young got busy Monday afternoon and notified the superintendent of schools and the matter was soon adjusted. The boys got busy Monday night and climbed the flag staff and took down their pennant and replaced the cable in the pulleys and the smoke blew over.

AMUSEMENTS

A picture that will be hailed as one of the big successes of the current season is the Paramount production of "Children of Jazz" which was given a highly successful premier showing at the Met theater last night. Theodore Kosloff, Ricardo Cortez, Robert Cain and Eileen Percy are featured. Miss Percy, as Babs Weston is engaged to marry Richard Forestall who returns from Europe with Babs' father, John Weston, to find Babs the central figure of a series of wild jazz parties. Forestall learns that Babs, jokingly, has become engaged to two young wasters, one of them already married. He leaves, telling Babs that he will have nothing more to do with her.

As the story proceeds Babs with Ted Carter and Lina and Clyde Dunbar, is stranded on an island where it chances that Richard Forestall is visiting his father, who, with a few servants, lives here in the manner of the people of the 1850's. Richard compels Babs and her friends to don quaint costumes and to remain on the island indefinitely. After many successful attempts to escape, Weston, notified by Richard by wireless that his daughter is safe, arrives to find Forestall, believing that Babs loves Ted Carter, preparing to leave for good. But Ted has something to say and the picture closes with Babs and Richard standing on the shore watching Ted sail from the small harbor into a new life. A life of jazz for all had come to an end.

This production is as thrilling as it is entertaining. The supporting cast is of the finest and includes Irene Dalton, Frank Currier, Snitz Edwards and Lillian Drew. Jerome Storm was the director.

BIG GLASS BROKEN

One of the big panes of plate glass on the west side of the new Crist block was broken Monday afternoon when a hammer in the hands of one of the carpenters, Harley Wilson, fell and shattered the glass. This is the second big pane broken accidentally in a week. The other pane was broken on the Main street side of the building when Mr. Crawford, the expert glass setter of the J. C. Coulson company, was placing the pane in the window frame.

The glass was not insured. The one on the Main street side was valued at $150 and the other was valued at $100.

Great Value of Redwood.

Redwood lumber is largely used on the Pacific coast, as it has great natural resistance to rot and fire. Heart redwood when placed in contact with the ground will remain in good condition for 25 years or more, whereas a great many other species rot out in a few years. The redwood heartwood is also able to repel the attacks of decay-producing fungi, because of the presence of tannin, oils and resins obnoxious to fungi.

OFFICIAL IS MAKING GOOD

Thad H. Brown, Secretary of State, Looks After Interests of People.

Various Reforms Have Been Worked Out and Economies Have Been Accomplished—Good Results Were Shown in Transmission of Returns.

It is pleasing to cast an eye in the way of a Republican who has measured up to the full requirements of his office. In reality this applies to every Republican who holds a position in the Capitol given him by virtue of the people's choice. But just now attention is particularly directed to Thad H. Brown, secretary of state. This is a most important place in the scheme of our government and it is essential to have a man of ample capacity occupying a post, so directly associated with the welfare of the people. Mr. Brown has made no incident of disappointment on the minds of those who elected him.

He came into office on the eighth of January last. Since then he has accomplished many things worth while, in addition to the prescribed duties of the office which include the administration of the election laws; filing and preserving the laws, as enacted by the general assembly; seeing that the rules governing corporations are not violated or held lightly; enforcing the law concerning automobile licenses and collecting millions of dollars annually in fees, which are given into the care of the state treasury.

These things require time and a prudent mind, if carefully done. They have been rightfully executed under the administration of Mr. Brown. Beyond the necessary requirements of his place he has done more. During the last session of the legislature a number of measures were introduced, as the outcome of recommendations he had made. These stood for the correction of ills in the code of election laws. Barring a few minor exceptions they were adopted by the general assembly. Some are now in effect; others were vetoed by the governor. The latter will again be presented when the legislature meets reinforced with additional recommendations, which Mr. Brown is now drafting.

A very important reform brought about by the secretary was the law which speeds the return of elections and hastens their transmission to the people, thru the medium of the press. It does away with delays, heretofore of such unnecessary and therefore more provoking frequency. It is known as the "Bender-Spidel" bill and was the outcome of conferences between Secretary Brown and newspaper representatives. As a result the people of the state, can, in the future, know the outcome of elections the night they are held or the next morning, at the least.

Mr. Brown is studying economy. He is at work diligently on a plan to minimize expense in the conduct of the election machinery of the state, a reform as conspicuously needed, as it has been conspicuously absent. This has been particularly true in several primary elections where money, of no benefit either to the candidates or the public has been expended.

Due to the efforts of the secretary of state, in a large way, the Carpenter law was passed by the last legislature vetoed by the governor and then re-passed over his objections. This is going to save the taxpayers a goodly sum. It provides for the publishing of the biennial appropriation bill in a pamphlet, apart from the "year book" of laws, printed after the close of each biennial session of the general assembly. This is a very proper arrangement and one calculated to hold down the drain on the public purse.

The acceptance of applications for annual automobile license tags, the assigning of distinctive license numbers and the collection of the annual auto tax, have been simplified and standardized under his administration. It is now done by deputy registrars under bond in every county, instead of being compelled, thru stress of work, to depend upon private corporations, assistants in the distribution of tags and the collection of license fees. So rapid has been the growth of the automobile licensing department it will put a 24-hour a day service into operation.

It is no small task to issue papers of incorporation to new concerns for the conduct of business in the state. This comes under the direction of the secretary of state. People hardly realize the magnitude of this work. From June 8 to October 4 of this year the receipts of the corporation department reached the total of $1,003,

925.48 and new concerns were incorporated to the number of 3403. A very pleasing feature of the work has been the large volume of kindly letters received by Mr. Brown, sent him by attorneys, handling legal work in connection with the corporations seeking to be licensed, testifying to the satisfactory and courteous way in which their applications have been given attention.

It is all only another illustration of a Republican state official hewing close to the line for which he was elected, refusing to branch out on the side tracks and really making good.

The practice of using visiting cards has come down to us from sixteenth century Italy. ORONTES RIVER MAKES HISTORY

Stream Has Always Played Important Role.

PEOPLE DIG LICORICE ROOT

"The Orontes river, in northern Syria, which citizens of Mecca claim as the northern boundary of the Island of the Arabs, the native name for Arabia, has always played an important role in the theater of Asia where East meets West," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Juvenal, the great Roman satirist, uttered what may seem like a geographic untruth when he said that the waters of the Orontes overflowed into the 'Tiber,' but many historians have claimed that the river was an important factor in bringing about the downfall of the Roman empire. Along this path made by Nature between the Mediterranean and the lands of the East the superstitions and corruption of Asia came to Rome, brought by the Roman legions, and Greek art and civilization, together with Roman law, flowed to the rising sun.

An Early Earthquake Theory. "It has been said that the river derived its name from a man who built a bridge over it. After one of the great earthquakes in Roman times had changed the course of the river, the oracle declared that the bones of a man of colossal size found in the old river bed were those of Orontes, and on the ancient coins of Antioch, the most famous city which ever existed along its banks, the river is personified as a youth swimming at the feet of the female figure representing the city. The old name of the river was Typhon after that terrible mythological dragon buried under the mountains around Antioch whose frequent writhings and twistings were believed to be the cause of the numerous earthquakes along the river valley.

"The giant under the earth still turns and tosses and mutters and makes the earth tremble in the vicinity of Antioch. It is one of the few non-volcanic regions of the earth in which earthquakes occur. "According to Syrians, the Orontes also is peopled by water-spirits, which are believed to be the authors of fertility. When the water of the river, which has been diverted into irrigation ditches, again is allowed to flow across the river bed, childless Syrian women wade out into the channel hoping for the embrace of the water-spirit in the oncoming rush of the stream.

Meanders Through Steppes. "Rising down in the great springs of the Inter-Lebanon district, near the ancient city of Baalbek, the great river flows northward almost parallel to the Mediterranean coast, falling 2,000 feet through a rocky gorge. The great depression through which the river flows, traversing Syria from the Taurus mountains to the Sinal desert, has few outstanding physical features. It is made up mostly of broad plateaus of steppe land, rock and debris. The river widens out at Hamma into a rich district containing the sites of the ancient towns of Apamea and Larissa. At Jisr-al-Hadid, the river turns westward around the great plain of Antioch.

"Though in the main the river is un-navigable, its valley has for ages been a convenient highway for traffic from north to south. Roads from the north and northeast, from Damascus and Coele-Syria converge at Antioch, and along the depression and across the Sinal peninsula have passed armies bound to and from Egypt for hundreds of generations. Today the fleet-footed Arabian and the rocking camel are fast giving place to the invincible automobile and the motor lorry.

Its Source and Mouth Cities. "No two cities in the world have had more romantic histories than those at its source and near its mouth. Baalbek, the ancient city of Baal, the sun-god, with its famous ruins of a temple made of veritable megaliths, stirs the imagination as does Antioch, which in its glorious days saw the horses of Ben-Hur crash past the chariot of the proud Roman, saw mighty Trajan, with fragments of his Roman army which he was to lead against the Parthians sheltering in its huge circus in the midst of the severe earthquake of 115 A. D., and watched with careless eye the rolling of the Roman legions in its beautiful grove of Daphne. "When the hot, malaria-breathing winds from the east blow across the valley of the Orontes, the inhabitants take to the mountains and plateaus where the climate is especially agreeable. For most of them it is convenient to do so, for excellent pasture is found in various areas, and it is never difficult for these Bedouins to take up their tents and move all their household effects to pleasanter surroundings. No reliable statistics are obtainable upon the cattle in Syria, but handbooks say that the number in the Orontes valley is considerable. Apamea in the days of Antioch's glory was the home of the great national stud which boasted 30,000 mares and 300 stallions.

"A good many of the inhabitants have been lured by American dollars in digging licorice root on plantations where great wooden water-wheels have been lifting the Orontes into irrigation ditches in order that cough-syrup and plug-tobacco manufacturers may supply our demands."

Far-Seeing Youth.

Robert had been angry at James for several days and I was surprised to hear him call over to James and invite him to come and ride on his new sled. Later I questioned him as to his forgiveness of James and Robert explained: "Well, Bill told me Jim was going to have a party next week and I didn't want to lose out."—Exchange.

National Prosperity.

No country can endure long if its foundations are not laid deep in the material prosperity which comes from thrift, business energy and enterprise, from hard, unsparring effort in the fields of industrial activity; but neither was any nation ever yet truly great if it relied upon material prosperity alone.—Theodore Roosevelt.

HOW TO LOCATE ENGINE TROUBLES

Even experienced motorists find it hard sometimes to locate various engine troubles. This chart will help you do it. It is a compilation of all kinds of sounds emanating from beneath the hood and the cause of each. Keep this handy. It will shorten many a search for the source of some dangerous knock or pounding.

Sound.	Trouble.
Hissing	Cylinder release cock open; walls scored; head gasket loose; spark plug loose or broken.
Hissing or whistling...	Air leak in manifold joints.
Hissing, back firing...	Valve stems bent.
Knocking	Spark too far advanced; lower crankcase bolts loose.
Knock at high speed...	Worn piston.
Knock when spark is advanced	Carbon in combustion chamber.
Short, metallic knock...	Cylinder block loose.
Knock from overheat-
ing	Water jackets clogged.
Dull, metallic knock...	Worn or loose piston pins.
Sharp knock	Loose connecting rod; tappet out of adjustment.
Heavy, metallic knock...	Looseness or end play in main bearings.
Dull knock	Loose crankshaft bearings.
Clicking	Fan blades striking obstacles; broken fan hub bearings; valves loose or cracked; valve stems worn; timing gears loose or teeth worn.
Dull pound	Loose flywheel; loose crankcase; overheated cooling system, due to radiator leak, etc.
Grinding, squeaking ..	Oil level too low; pump obstructed.
Squeaking	Magneto or distributing bearings dry.
Blowing sound	Oil leaking through crankcase gaskets.
Back-firing	Broken or weak valve springs.
Misfiring	Spark plug gap too small.

MORE ATTENTION NEEDED FOR CAR

Breakdown Inevitable if Continuously Forced at Highest Possible Pressure.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

A car is like a human being. It can work moderately through a long life-time and only "grow old gracefully," but if continuously forced at the highest possible pressure a breakdown is inevitable sooner or later.

Avoid subjecting a car continuously to unreasonably heavy road shocks. Rushing over rough roads at high speed is bound to result in abnormal wear and tear. All body and running gear parts loosen up prematurely under such treatment and the damage from road rack is probably nearly quadrupled by doubling the speed.

Examples of Harshness.

Refrain from harshness in operation, of which the following are examples: Racing the engine; stepping on the throttle, to obtain maximum acceleration; jamming on the brakes brutally; forcing the gears together when they do not engage readily; letting in the clutch violently and skidding around curves.

Beware of heedlessness in operation, for it is this shortcoming that brings about the frozen radiator, the bearings that are burned out or cylinders that are scored from lack of oil, and the reverse gears that are stripped by trying to mesh them while a car is in motion, not to speak of all the damage caused by collisions.

Repair Defects Promptly.

The prompt correction of defects when they first develop and before their consequences have become serious, is another important consideration. If a loose connecting rod bearing is at once taken care of, when its hammering is first noticed, the repair outlay need not be large, but if repairs are neglected until the rod has broken loose and wrecked the crankcase and perhaps the whole cylinder block, the replacement expense will be staggering.

Let no motorist fail to realize that, in nine cases out of ten, it is imperfect lubrication that brings a car to the repair shop. Repair expense is nothing else than tribute exacted by the Demon Friction.

HANDY GARAGE WASHBOWL

Built in Corner and Does Not Take Up Any Floor Space—Can Be Readily Made.

The drawing shows a concrete washbowl for use in garages. The bowl is built in a corner, as shown, so that it will not take any floor space. A number of holes are made in the wall at the point where the bowl is to be made, so that the concrete will be anchored securely. A wooden form is made as shown in the right-hand detail, two holes being drilled in it for the two pipes that are brought through the bowl as indicated; one of these is the water pipe, and is fitted at the top with two elbows, a nipple and a valve; the other pipe is the drain pipe, which runs under the floor to the sewer. An ordinary tin washpan is used as a form for the bowl. Several coats of heavy oil paint and two coats of white enamel are applied to the inside and top of the bowl, to waterproof it and make it smooth.

When the Railroad Was New.
Among the oldest forms of decorated glass bottles or flasks known to have been made in the United States is one which bears a relief design representing the first railway. The device shows a horse drawing a four-wheeled car along a rail. The vehicle is piled full of bales, lumps of coal or packages of freight. Around the margin is "Success to the railroad."

BLIND INVENTOR LIGHTS THE WAY

J. Banks Nicholson, Washington's blind inventor, has just perfected automobile headlights to greatly reduce traffic smashups and loss of life. He made his models by the touch system and has just put a machine on the street to demonstrate that a blind man cannot only reconcile himself to perpetual darkness, but can shed the light of his high beneficence on others. The invention consists of two headlights which turn automatically in the direction taken by the car, much after the fashion of the human eye. The lights are so tilted that they blind neither the pedestrian nor the autoist. Attached to the headlights are rear green lights, which are said to be more satisfactory than tail lights. Mr. Nicholson is shown in the photograph.

DAMAGE SUIT

Robert and Bessie Reed Ask $16,962 for Faulty Furnace Installation.

A $16,962 damage suit was filed Friday in the Ross county common pleas court by Robert and Bessie Reed against the Holland Furnace Co. The plaintiff's attorneys are Barton Walters, of this city and Frank Redfern of Adelphi.

The plaintiffs claim that a fire, which on December 15, 1921, totally destroyed their hotel, residence, grocery store room and pool room at Adelphi together with their personal property was due to the "negligent and wanton" manner in which the defendant company installed one of its furnaces. In addition the plaintiffs claim they were deprived of the use of said buildings for six months, meaning an additional loss of $600.

For all of which they claim a total damage of $16,962.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON
"I do not even believe that China men have celluloid fingernails," said the Hotel Stenographer.
"Huh?" asked the House Detective.
"I just said that one by one my delusions have failed, my superstitions have ceased to be convincing and the way the world is wagging, soon I will not believe there is any virtue in the left hind foot of a rabbit, shot in a graveyard on a moonlight night by a cross-eyed dorkie."
"As soon as I was old enough to want anything more expensive than a quarter doll and a 39 cent set of toy dishes, they let me know that Santa Claus, like a trained Hon, simply isn't. From that time on I have seen my fondest hopes decay and all my illusions go blowie, as the poet says."
"I have quit picking up pins with their points turned toward me; I do not believe a horseshoe is good luck. The prejudice against loose horseshoes puncturing the tires of the flivver, has unhorsed the horse, as it were!"
"I do not worry any more about walking under a ladder since they began to let painters down from the roof by a rope, like spiders, and four-leaved covers will not grow up thru concrete along the good roads we have everywhere."
"When we were kids we believed in fairies and gnomes and pixies but not the comic strips have put different ideas in our heads. We used to use rouge in secret, and now we paint and powder in public. I wish somebody would fool me about something pretty."
"What's the matter?" asked the House Detective.
"I just found out that a guy I've been going with, who told me he was in a bank, is a janitor. I thought I had me a cashier, at least."

BONUS BILL WILL BE PASSED FIRST

Tax Reduction Plan May Be Modified as a Result.

SENATOR WATSON'S POSITION

Leader of Senate Republicans Declares There Must Be Money In Treasury To Pay Bonus—Would Hold Tax Reduction Bill In Committee Unless There Is Certainty It Can Be Passed.

Washington, Nov. 27.—Secretary Mellon's plan for tax reduction was given partial indorsement by Senator Watson of Indiana, a member of the finance committee and acknowledged leader of the regular Republican group in the senate.

Senator Watson said he would support the Mellon plan on general terms, but if modification in the tax reduction program are necessary in order to take care of the adjusted compensation to soldiers, he will insist upon having such modifications made. He said:

"The bonus bill will be passed first, so we might as well proceed on the theory that whatever reduction may be made in the volume of the payments must be made on the basis that the bonus shall be paid, and that there must be money in the treasury to pay it. The bonus would not cost more than $80,000,000 the first year, and in modifying the Mellon plan we should not suggest reducing the taxes to such a point that the money for the bonus will not be on hand."

Senator Watson declared that as a member of the finance committee he will refuse to vote the tax reduction bill out of the committee unless there is an absolute certainty that it can be passed. He said if there exists the prospect that the bill will be buffeted around the senate and prevented from passage until late in the summer of next year, he will insist upon having it held in the committee.

A statement issued by Senator Robison of Arkansas, Democratic leader, held that the Democratic minority is anxious to have taxes reduced, if it can be done without creating a deficit. He declared, however, the Democrats will not support any plan to cut the taxes and reject the soldier bonus, adding:

"If the administration commits itself to the policy that the maintenance of the present so-called nuisance taxes and rates on earned incomes is indispensable and unavoidable should the bonus bill be passed, little will be accomplished in the way of tax reductions. The expenses incident to adjusted compensation for the former service men may be borne by a bond issue. The bonus question should be promptly disposed of; it has been delayed too long already."

Senator Robison said that along with a judicious revision of income tax rates there should be a general revision of tariff rates.

MAY PARDON CRAIG

President Has the Power, the Department of Justice Holds.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The department of justice handed President Coolidge a formal ruling declaring that the president has the power to pardon Comptroller Charles L. Craig of New York, under sentence to serve 60 days in jail for contempt of court.

The opinion was written by Solicitor General Beck, who was called into a conference by President Coolidge just before Senator Copeland and Representative La Guardia put before him a formal request to extend executive clemency to the New York official. There is a distinction between a "request" and an "application," it was pointed out.

One point raised by the president on which he asked the opinion is whether he can pardon a person who has not requested clemency. While it is understood that Mr. Beck found that the president had wide latitude and could extend clemency if he so desired, the president does not wish to interfere unless Craig, or some one authorized to act for him, files a formal application.

Anti-Klan Bill's Status.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 27.—The Monck amendment, providing for a filing of the names of officers and custodians of membership rolls of secret organizations, withstood the efforts of legislators. It remained intact for further consideration after the vote to strike it off stood 17 to 17. In the senate it found a defender in Mrs. Cooney, the only woman member of the upper house.

EXAMINERS WANTED

To Probe Tax Duplicates In School Districts Asking State Aid.

Columbus, Nov. 27.—The state tax commission has adopted a resolution asking the directors of finance to furnish the commission with a sufficient number of examiners to determine whether the property of 667 school districts in Ohio is assessed at a reasonable proportion of its value. This action is in conformity to a law enacted by the last general assembly providing that such an investigation be made at the request of the director of education to determine whether the property within a school district asking state aid is on the duplicate at a reasonable proportion of its value. The districts concerned are located in 67 counties.

NEW YORK POLICE GRILL SUSPECTS

Claim They Plotted Murder of Bank Messengers.

New York, Nov. 27.—After putting Morris Barlow Diamond through an exhaustive examination, the police declared that Diamond, his brother Joseph and a number of their associates in the Diamond Box company were nothing more than a "corporation for the promotion of thievery, dope smuggling, rum running and sundry other crimes."

And it was this corporation, the police charge, that plotted and executed the murder of the two West End bank messengers here on Nov. 14 last.

Joseph Diamond has been put under arrest and William Fried, an employee of the box company, detained as a material witness. All deny knowledge of the bank messengers' murder. But police declare that finger prints found on the Cadillac car in which the slayers made their escape and finger prints taken of Morris Diamond when he was arrested once for gun toting, were identical. For Morris Diamond, before his arrest in Cleveland, had figured several times in police records.

The finger prints in fact were the clues which started Detectives Donahue and Martin on Morris Diamond's trail. This led them first to Philadelphia, where Diamond has entertained chorus girls on a lavish scale. From there the trail took them into the state of Ohio and to the Statler hotel in Cleveland.

Dope Peddlers and Bootleggers Busy.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 27.—Recent deaths due to poison liquor and drug store robberies for narcotics caused local and federal authorities to unite in a war on bootleggers and dope peddlers. Pre-holiday demand is blamed for the suddenly increased activity of bootleggers and the consequent flooding of the market with dangerous liquor, which has killed seven here and six in Philadelphia in the last few days. The state police will probably be used to break up the rum ring in the state.

Two Killed by Autos.

Cleveland, Nov. 27.—Robert Jenkins, a deaf mute, was run down in front of his home when he attempted to cross the street to join playmates. Harry Linkenstein, 27, died from a broken neck a few hours after his automobile crashed into another car in Fairview village.

NEW PACT WITH CANADA SOUGHT

Would Stop Liquor Smuggling Along the Border.

CONFERENCE ON AT OTTAWA

United States to Ask That Suspected Smugglers Be Subject to Search and Seizure and That Violators Be Subject to Extradition—Twelve-Mile Treaty Held to Be In Effect by Officials.

Washington, Nov. 27.—A Canadian-American treaty to stop liquor smuggling along the international boundary will be sought by the United States delegation to the conference between representatives of the two governments, which meets at Ottawa today.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Moss, head of the American delegation, has arrived at Ottawa, carrying with him the outline of the proposed agreement.

The United States will ask that Canada refuse clearance papers to liquor laden vessels leaving for American ports, that suspected smugglers operating on the Great Lakes be subject to search and seizure, and that persons charged with violating liquor laws be subject to extradition.

In return, the United States is willing to offer Canada a treaty agreement permitting the Canadian authorities to transport liquors across Alaska to the Klondike country.

The United States also will ask that the Canadian authorities report all shipments of liquor destined for the United States by automobile or airplane. No vessels of less than 250 tons would be allowed to clear Canadian ports with liquor cargoes for any destination whatever, under another American proposal. Mr. Moss expects the conference to reach an agreement.

The so-called 12-mile treaty with the British government, permitting search and seizure of rum ships outside the three-mile zone, is in effect operative today. It was stated at the treasury department. It was in view of this agreement, treasury officials explained, that coast guard cutters ventured outside the three-mile limit Sunday and seized the British rum runner Tomaka, when those on board the vessel believed her to be safe from the arm of United States law.

The United States and the British governments have come to an accord on the terms of the rum running treaty, and it was with this distinct understanding that a radio was sent to coast guard cutters to stop the Tomaka anywhere found, it was declared. There will be no protest from the British government because of the incident, British officials declared, because the two governments are so confident the treaty will be ratified they are acting upon the verbal understandings.

WHEELER REPLIES

Says That Congressman Tinkham's Charges Are Groundless.

Washington, Nov. 26.—Congressman Tinkham's latest charges and drive against the Anti-Saloon league are false and groundless, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the drys, declared here.

"The proposal of the tinkering congressman to take the league apart and see how it works will not impress the American people until they are convinced that he is inspired by a desire to promote the public welfare, instead of that of the liquor interests," he declared.

Mr. Wheeler added that the visit of former Representative Volstead to Europe was by appointment of the president and not at the expense of the Anti-Saloon league. In conclusion, he declared that his organization is the only national body that has complied with federal statutes regarding election activities.

Review of Craig Case Urged.

New York, Nov. 27.—The board of estimate of New York city drew up and approved a memorial to President Coolidge urging that he review the case of Comptroller Charles L. Craig. The memorial will be handed to the president by Acting Mayor Murray Hubert, who will probably be accompanied to Washington by associate members of the board. The memorial declares that the 60-day sentence imposed on the comptroller is not only a great personal injustice to a man who has not been guilty of an act of moral turpitude, but may be a serious embarrassment to New York's million dollar a day government.

Crops In Buckeye State.

Columbus, Nov. 27.—The federal department of agriculture announces that the 1923 Ohio corn yield per acre is estimated to be 41.5 bushels, as against a 10-year average of 39 bushels. The Ohio potato and apple crops also are of the bumper variety. The potato crop is estimated at 12,348,000 bushels, as against 11,214,000 bushels last year. The apple crop is estimated at 12,395,000 bushels, as against 7,298,000 bushels last year.

Officers Find Dynamite.

Steubenville, O., Nov. 27.—With the discovery of 60 sticks of dynamite and the arrest of four foreigners, county authorities believe they are near a solution of the dynamiting of the home of Deputy Marshal Charles Pearce at Smithfield several months ago. The dynamite was found in a hay loft at the farm of Joe Rossi near Farlett, this county. The arrest of the four men soon followed.

Tortured by Moonshiners.

Toledo, Nov. 27.—Mike Szparagowski was kidnapped from his home here by two armed men who hurried Szparagowski across the Michigan state line and tortured him. The men, alleged moonshiners, claimed a still belonging to them had been stolen and blamed Szparagowski, who was hung up by his thumbs. The victim denied the charge.

Burglar Escapes.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 27.—When she arose from bed to get a pistol, after hearing a noise in her room, Mrs. Mary McGinnis stepped on a burglar, who was crawling on all fours into the room. The thief made a dash for the stairs, lost his footing, tumbled to the bottom and made his escape through an open kitchen window.

Loses $2,000 and Car.

Findlay, O., Nov. 27.—Two thousand dollars and a new auto was what it cost Luther Smeltzer of Chillicothe, O., for transporting liquor. A companion, Joseph Ehler, also of Chillicothe, pleaded not guilty and his hearing was set for Dec. 4. About $1,000 worth of liquor was seized in Smeltzer's car.

$100,000 Fire on Farm.

Springfield, O., Nov. 27.—Fire starting in six different buildings on farms owned by Thomas Mattinson, one mile west of South Charleston, caused damage estimated at $100,000. Twelve buildings, including four barns, were destroyed. Mr. Mattinson says he believes the fires were of incendiary origin.

Kerosene Explodes.

Willard, O., Nov. 27.—Ethel Cole, 19, was burned to death and her parents and her sister, Lucy, 14, were badly burned in an attempt to rescue Ethel in their farm home near Celeryville. Ethel attempted to start a fire with a can of kerosene and it exploded. The house was burned to the ground.

Train Hits Bus.

Cincinnati, Nov. 27.—Fred Rahe, 53, and McClellan Griffin, 20, were killed and three others injured when a work train hit a Sharonville bus at Lockland, near here. Noise made by the engine in the bus is believed to have drowned out the sound of the warning bell at the crossing.

Shot by Hunting Companion.

Coshocton, Nov. 27.—Roland Phillips, 18, son of Isa Phillips, Orange, died here from injuries suffered when he was struck in the abdomen by shot from a gun in the hands of Floyd Gardner, a hunting companion.

ADJOURN TO STUDY SUGGESTIONS

Governors Would Have Pennsylvania "Clean Up."

RAP ANTHRACITE INDUSTRY

Assert It Should Be Declared a Public Business and Regulated by Pennsylvania Laws—Anthracite Coal Tax Denounced as an Indefensible Levy—Governor Pinchot Makes Reply.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 27.—After three hours of criticism of the anthracite industry and the failure of Pennsylvania to adopt measures to control prices, the conference of governors, called by Governor Pinchot, adjourned until Dec. 13 to study suggestions presented during the session.

Two governors, George Silzer of New Jersey and J. A. O. Preus of Minnesota, with representatives of nine other states, took part in a severe arraignment of Pennsylvania's attitude in the anthracite problem. A suggestion for a "compact of states" by Governor Pinchot as a method to get united action to prevent extortion in the sale of anthracite was opposed by a number of representatives, and resolutions presented by Governor Silzer endorsing repeal of the anthracite coal tax and other laws which he declared obnoxious, failed of endorsement when the representatives of governors not present refused to vote until the suggestions made at the conference could be laid before their executives.

Governor Pinchot asked the co-operation of the other states. He said he did not see why Pennsylvania, which consumes one-tenth of the anthracite mined within its borders, should attempt to regulate the industry for the other nine-tenths of consumers of other states.

Governor Preus insisted that the anthracite industry should be declared a public business and regulated by Pennsylvania laws. He cited cases of control of elevators in Minnesota, North Dakota and other western states. He said regulation was an obligation on the people of Pennsylvania to take care of the rest of the anthracite using public.

Governor Silzer said he was opposed to the compact of states unless it were empowered to "come into Pennsylvania and clean up." He styled the tax an "indefensible levy," and insisted that the tax levies a toll of from 50 cents to $1 a ton instead of only a cent on a dollar, as Governor Pinchot stated.

States represented were Ohio, Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Minnesota, Maryland, Rhode Island, Virginia, Michigan and New York.

DEATH TOLL CUT

Modern Mine Construction Saves Lives of 1,000 Workers.

Benton, Ill., Nov. 27.—Modern mine construction cut down the toll of life, which otherwise would have been frightful, to a minimum, when an explosion threatened 1,100 miners underground in the Orient mine here. This was the verdict of engineers following the check up of the casualties, two dead and 13 injured, which at first it was believed would mount into hundreds.

The Orient, the largest soft coal mine in the world, it was pointed out, was equipped with modern barrier pillars, which halted the spread of the flames and localized them immediately after the blast. The barriers, like the fire walls in storehouses, extend from the entrances underground and separate the entire mine area into numerous small sections. In the Orient mine the barriers are 50 feet thick.

RECEIVES WOMEN

Coolidge May Not Refer to World Court in His Message.

Washington, Nov. 27.—President Coolidge indicated to a delegation of women that he considers the world court of international justice already before the United States senate and will not refer to it in his message to congress. Headed by Mrs. Raymond Morgan, a special committee representing 11 women's organizations, urged him to make his recommendation to congress in the very strongest terms. He declined to commit himself except to say that he appreciated their interest and that the matter in which they are interested already is in the hands of the persons who will necessarily have the right to approve or disapprove.

HAS EBERT'S BACKING

Chancellor Albert Destined to Become Dictator of Germany.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—Dr. Heinrich F. Albert is scheduled to become the new dictator of Germany.

The executive powers of the republic which President Ebert transferred to General Von Seeckt during the Hitler-Ludendorff putsch will be taken from the commander of the reichswehr and given to the new chancellor.

The purpose is to replace rule by "generals" with a civilian dictatorship to conciliate the Socialists, who overthrew the Stresemann government when it failed to end military rule.

President Ebert is determined to stick by Dr. Albert in spite of the general rejection of Albert as chancellor by the parties in the reichstag. The president is said to have drafted a decree dissolving the reichstag if it rejects Albert as chancellor.

Watson Not "Stalking Horse."

Washington, Nov. 27.—As a "favorite son" candidate for the presidency, Senator James E. Watson of Indiana declared himself completely out of it. He asserted he has no intention of being a "stalking horse" for any other candidate seeking the nomination. If he gets into the race at all it will be for himself and for no one else. Furthermore, he will not decide whether or not to cast his hat into the ring until after he has looked long and carefully over the field and has convinced himself that he has a "fair" chance for the Republican nomination.

Navy to Meet Bears.

Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 27.—Formally inviting the University of California football eleven to meet the Navy squad here on New Year's day, an official invitation was sent by President W. F. Crelter of the Tournament of Roses association to Luther Nichols, graduate manager of the university.

VERA CRUZ SEIZED?

Armed Agrarians Reported to Have Caused Reign of Terror.

Mexico City, Nov. 27.—Disorder has broken out on the lower east coast of Mexico and agrarians, uniformed as federal troops, have entered the port of Vera Cruz and taken charge, according to a report here. The report declares that terror reigns throughout the city's streets as a result of killing and looting by the agrarians who, after gaining possession of the town, shouted "Long live Calles, the next president." One detachment of the agrarian mob is said to have arrested prominent citizens, placed them in a wooden shack and set fire to it, the victims managing to escape by digging under the floor before being consumed by the flames.

Georgian Gets Decision.

Boston, Nov. 27.—Young Stribling, the Georgia phenomenon, won every session of a 10-round bout with Joe Egan of Boston here last night. Egan refused to make a battle and his defensive skill kept the southern boy tied up throughout the bout. Stribling was the aggressor all the war.

Coats and Wraps Pretty and Warm

Favorite Winter Garments Are Built for Style and Service.

An arctic winter is headed this way. The news is in the very air—not because the weather man has confided the prophecy, but because a glorious season of fashions in furs has opened. Dress authorities say there has never been a time in all their experience when furs alone had such a vogue and literally dominated the entire category of styles.

Always, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, a woman who went in for good clothes has had a fur coat in her winter layout. It was the one note of indulgence in her wardrobe; her pride, and the envy of her less fortunate friends. If her estate chanced to be one of affluence, the coat was sable—the last word in luxury—for sable, like rubies, has ever had high value.

The possessor of a sealskin coat was once regarded as a person of rank in the world of fashion. One fur wrap was thought, in days past, to be a sufficient blessing for any one person, and not so long ago the shopkeeper who offered fur garments to his rich customers had often to employ all of his salesmanship to persuade them to buy fur instead of cloth for outer wraps.

The automobile changed all that, for fur motor coats became a necessity. Driving in the open, it was impossible to keep warm in anything but furs, and the motor salesman became, quite unconsciously, an ally of the dealer in furs. Enveloping wraps and ankle-length coats of the heavier furs were built in modish models and the vogue was established. All of the coarser varieties of fur were used for those first utility wraps—raccoon, opossum, coney, ringtail, civet cat—with the inevitable result that these came into prominence and their prices soared.

Beauty and style were not especially considered. Women who drove about in the earlier fur wraps looked not unlike frontiersmen dressed in buffalo and bear skins. They offered a great contrast with the slender silhouette.

Craze for Furs.

Now that there is a craze for furs, a woman who goes to buy her winter outfit selects as many fur wraps as formerly she bought coats of cloth and velvet and brocades. She finds need for a long coat for street and carriage wear—the carriage now being a limousine. This coat may be of sealskin, caracul, broadtail, squirrel or any one of several novelty furs and fur fabrics combined with real fur. Mink is, of course, more costly, but is popular for fair weather service and dressy daytime occasions. It is suitable also for informal evening wear, for no change of fashion has ever affected the dignity and solid value of mink.

This fur belongs to a woman of position in the social world. Her grandmother was proud to own a mink cape or a half-length dolman. The woman of today wears a mink coat, instep length, or a soft wrap that completely covers her. The cost of it would have dressed the lady or the dolman for a year. The affluent one wears Russian sable, not for the day only, but for all kinds of formal dress as well.

Ermine belongs traditionally to the trappings of royalty, and is ever a thing of beauty and refinement. As an entire garment it was not so popular formerly as now, made into gorgeous wraps and coats, long and short. The most exclusive models in ermine of Parisian origin are cut full, with wanton use of the fur. Some are the wide wrap-around garments. Some have a flaring flounce, are paneled or scalloped.

In a particularly gorgeous wrap of ermine a circular cape of the fur falls from the neck to a low waistline, richness upon richness. In another style of uncommon grace the upper part of the wrap is draped about the shoulders at one side, where the fur drops in a point and is finished with a long, heavy tassel of silk. In many of the new styles fur is draped as freely as if it were silk or any lighter material.

Ermine for Dress Occasions.

For the ball and dinner gown made of the lovely new fabrics in delicate shades, a wrap of ermine is the most suitable of all furs. But human fickleness that so easily transfers patronage has lost some of its passion for ermine as a dressy wrap, since the fur has been so generally used for more common wear in street coats, and so widely and cleverly imitated.

Ermine is essentially a fur for youth and the most engaging garments made of it are shown in the misses' and junior models. Some are long, to wear over the dainty dance frocks. Others, in the short jacquette style, have a decided cachet. One among the many charming samples of these little coats is made of black velvet and lined with ermine, a narrow band of the fur showing all around the edge, about the collar and the cuffs. The novel feature of this model is that it may be worn inside out, which the flapper finds amusing.

The jacquettes of ermine, mole, broadtail, caracul, in black, the natural cream shade, or taupe, the newest dye; and of nutria, rabbit or squirrel are tremendously popular for lunch at the restaurants and for other informal occasions. One sees really more of these than of the longer coats.

Sealskin has come back into its own and is more popular this season than it has been for many years. Not the same old coat in stereotyped model that endured so long, but new styles that have decided elegance. The very latest sealskin coat is made with no other fur and no trimmings, its skins are selected and the lines of the garment are quite new. Designers have shown the keenest interest in handling this fur and have presented several models of distinction.

One is a coat cut in straight lines from the throat to the instep, the general build of the garment being boxy, the sleeves straight and rather wide. A voluminous collar that crushes above the chin, and wide, slightly flaring cuffs are added. A dressier model in seal is cut after the plan of a cloth coat, the skirt, in three tiers, being attached to the waist. One other is a loose wrap-around with wide sleeves and deep, soft collar. On this an ornament of bronze beads with two heavy tassels forms the clasp over one hip.

Self-Fur Collar and Cuffs.

Sealskin is so smooth and uniform that it works out with unusual success in the deep flounce model, one having a slightly flaring skirt that ripples all around, with self-fur collar and cuffs. Some especially handsome wraps in seal are trimmed with skunk and other furs, one model having a band of skunk around the bottom of the straight coat, extending in a narrowing strip up the front, ending low at the waist. Another sealskin has a cape of its own fur, a band of fox outlining the edge and forming the collar and cuffs; but this has an over-trimmed appearance and is less smart than the garments of all-seal.

A new favorite has been elected, and chinchilla is now the choice of all the furs for evening. It is not inexpensive, as everyone knows, and it is adaptable to the needs of any age. Chinchilla becomes a dowager as well as it does a debutante, though it must be said that its soft grays harmonize most happily with a rose-leaf complexion.

Chinchilla is compensating to the modiste, for it combines well with other furs. It makes the most stylish collars and cuffs, for example, on a coat of broadtail or caracul. As all-over garments most of the models in chinchilla are rather simple in line, because the fur itself is deep and the shadings in its color are very beautiful.

The fur neckpiece is no longer the piece de resistance in a fashionable toilet. As a protection, worn with a suit or a one-piece dress, it is almost indispensable, but as a fad it has passed and is now merely an article of utility.

Diseases of Cabbage Family Preventable

Bulletin Says Rotation of Crops Is Advisable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Practically all the crops which belong to the cabbage family, such as cauliflower, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, kohlrabi, collards, and kale, turnips, radishes and rape, are subject to the same diseases. Such diseases, says the United States Department of Agriculture, are preventable in the main by simple means of plant sanitation.

A new bulletin just issued by the department as Farmers' Bulletin 1351, Cabbage Diseases, treats of the spread of the various diseases and their control. Some of the more important cabbage diseases discussed in this bulletin are black-leg (foot-rot, wilt), soft rot, root-rot (wilt), downy mildew, white rust, drop (watery soft-rot), spot diseases of cauliflower, black leaf-spot (black mold), ring-spot, powdery mildew, and damping-off.

Rotation of crops should be practiced, avoiding crops which belong to the cabbage family and other closely-related crops. Mustard and related weeds which harbor cabbage pests should be kept down. Drainage water and refuse from diseased cabbage fields will carry infection. So will stable manure with which diseased material has been mingled.

The seed bed is often the source of infection. The greatest pains should be taken to insure healthy plants. Locate the seed bed on new ground, if possible, or sterilize by steam the soil used. Clubroot is avoided by the free use of lime and by setting healthy plants. Disinfect all cabbage seed before planting, to prevent black-rot and black-leg. Yellowing is due to a fungus which persists in the soil for many years. Varieties of cabbage resistant to this disease are available.

A copy of this bulletin may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Finds Beef Type Can Be Good Milk Producer, Too

"It is possible for the beef type of shorthorn to be a heavy milk producer," says Dr. C. W. McCampbell, head of the animal husbandry department in the Kansas state agricultural college. "This was demonstrated by the department at the Sni-A-Bar farm belonging to the W. R. Nelson estate, near Kansas City."

"The show at the Sni-A-Bar farm was the first strictly shorthorn show in the United States. The best herds throughout the country were shown. One of the most interesting features was an exhibit of the heavy-milking, thick-fleshed shorthorns forming an experiment now being conducted by the animal husbandry department."

The chief purpose of this experiment referred to by Doctor McCampbell is to show that it is possible for the beef-type shorthorn to be a heavy milk producer. The cows in this experiment are giving from 1,000 to 1,500 gallons of milk a year and their calves are winning prizes at the international live stock shows each year.

Desirable All-Egg Meal Developed in Ohio

A process has recently been developed by some poultrymen in Ohio, which may make a desirable feed by converting the by-product eggs from hatcheries into an all-egg meal for poultry feeding. According to these men, about half of all the eggs that go into hatcheries finally become a by-product from which little value has been realized. In fact, they say, many hatcheries are obliged to pay for the removal of this product. The process consists in passing the liquid eggs over a heated revolving drum, which cooks and dries the product. The new feed is said to be rich in protein, vitamins, fats and minerals, and in tests seem to be proving a good feed for growing chicks.

Watch Your Grading in Offering Fruit for Sale

Grading laws in many states are making better returns possible for better growers. The public has confidence in a standard grade, and it is to the interests of farmers and fruit growers to maintain proper standards.

As a matter of self-protection any one offering fruit for sale must see to it that the fruit grades up to the label. When inspection shows otherwise things may be a little uncomfortable for the packer. If you are putting up "choice" stuff which is supposed to be sound, ripe, of one variety, of a certain size, free of dirt, insect, disease, or weather injury, see that the fruit is all of this, and more. A little extra quality has never been known to hurt the reputation of a man putting up a fruit pack.

Not Difficult to Wean Colt by Proper Feeding

It is common practice to wean colts at from four to six months of age. If the colt has learned to eat grain, there should be no difficulty in the weaning process and it should not suffer any setback in its growth. Ground oats, bran and cornmeal, one-third of each by weight, to which is added a little oil meal make a good ration for the weaning. Provide good pasture and in the winter, clover or alfalfa hay. Be sure it has plenty of fresh water at all times.

Finally the police were called and Pedro was taken to the station and his employer sent for.
"What's the idea?" demanded the coal dealer, "why didn't you come back after you delivered the coal?"
"I no know I can come back," wailed Pedro, "I thought I was sold with the coal; you weighed me with it, senior!"

Butterfly Perfume.
It has long been known that many butterflies and moths have scent glands that emit delicate and pleasing odors. A well known example here in America is that of the monarch butterfly.
A government naturalist describes the perfumes of some of the characteristic English butterflies, which he interestingly likens to the odors of well known English flowers. A distinctive and characteristic perfume is probably secreted by each species. That this is so is supported by the records that the males of the large garden white butterfly diffuse a faint but delicious scent of balsam or lemon, those of the small white Pieris rapae shed an aroma of thyme and from the green-veiled white Pieris napi there emanates a faint but delightfully odoriferous perfume resembling that of the lemon verbena. Other butterflies, according to their kind, diffuse other odors, as sweetbrier, honeysuckle and other choice perfumes, which are sometimes so strong as to be perceptible to the blunter senses of mankind.

Use Butterflies as Food
Butterflies, which are very prolific in Australia, are suffocated in millions by the aborigines and, separated from their wings, pressed into cakes and eaten.

FEW WILD TURKEYS LEFT IN AMERICA

Game Birds Almost Extirpated in the United States.

One of the most spectacular of all American birds is the wild turkey. It is distinctly an American product and is found in no other place but North America.

Woven in the clothing wrapped about mummified remains of cliff dwellers in Arizona and New Mexico are found the feathers of turkeys. There are other evidences in the caves showing that the birds were kept in a state of domestication by the aborigines. When early in the sixteenth century the Spanish conquerors invaded Mexico, they found turkeys that had been domesticated by the Indians. Some of these they took back with them to Spain, where it was found they would breed in captivity. Their descendants were removed to France and England, and later brought to the United States by settlers. This is the history of the common domestic turkey which people are wont to have on the table when celebrating Christmas or Thanksgiving day. A short time ago, as time goes, wild turkeys were to be met within almost any suitable locality southward from a line drawn through southern Maine, southern Ontario and South Dakota. All over the eastern United States they were abundant, as well as among the hills and canyons of Colorado and the semi-arid deserts of New Mexico. Every year one may find on some magazine cover the picture of an old Puritan father with his blunderbuss on one shoulder and a wild turkey on the other. Thus do our men of art keep before our attention one of the past glories of New England. Where on Cape Cod may one find a wild turkey today? Where may you seek for it in Rhode Island, New York, Iowa or Indiana, or in many other states of its former range? In a few isolated out-of-the-way parts of our country some of these wonderful birds still exist. Ten years ago I found a number in Lee county, Florida. But soon a thousand hunters were in the field after them and the turkeys are vanishing from south Florida. There are still some to be found about the great southern swamps, as, for example, in North and South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana, and one may see signs of the great turkey in southern Texas, but here chiefly on a few great ranches where hunting is restricted. As a game bird the wild turkey has practically ceased to function.—T. Gilbert Pearson in the World's Work.

CLASS COLORS
Juniors and Seniors Utilize Big Flag Staff at Court House.
The male members of the senior and junior classes are all asked over their respective colors. Friday night the juniors ran their colors up on the court house flag staff. This was too much for the seniors and on Sunday night the colors of the juniors came down and seniors' colors waved all day Monday. To make sure that the seniors could not take down the junior pennant the cable was drawn thru the pulley and the coil was carried midway up the pole and tied to the flag staff. The venturesome climber then smeared the pole with axle grease on his way down to make sure that the pennant would remain.
The court house officials recently paid out twenty dollars to have the flag staff fitted up with a new cable and pulleys. Sheriff Young got busy Monday afternoon and notified the superintendent of schools and the matter was soon adjusted. The boys got busy Monday night and climbed the flag staff and took down their pennant and replaced the cable in the pulleys and the smoke blew over.

AMUSEMENTS

A picture that will be hailed as one of the big successes of the current season is the Paramount production of "Children of Jazz" which was given a highly successful premier showing at the Met theater last night. Theodore Kosloff, Ricardo Cortez, Robert Cain and Eileen Percy are featured. Miss Percy, as Babs Weston is engaged to marry Richard Forestall who returns from Europe with Babs' father, John Weston, to find Babs the central figure of a series of wild jazz parties. Forestall learns that Babs, jokingly, has become engaged to two young wasters, one of them already married. He leaves, telling Babs that he will have nothing more to do with her.

As the story proceeds Babs with Ted Carter and Lina and Clyde Dunbar, is stranded on an island where it chances that Richard Forestall is visiting his father, who, with a few servants, lives here in the manner of the people of the 1850's. Richard compels Babs and her friends to don quaint costumes and to remain on the island indefinitely. After many successful attempts to escape, Weston, notified by Richard by wireless that his daughter is safe, arrives to find Forestall, believing that Babs loves Ted Carter, preparing to leave for good. But Ted has something to say and the picture closes with Babs and Richard standing on the shore watching Ted sail from the small harbor into a new life. A life of jazz for all had come to an end.

This production is as thrilling as it is entertaining. The supporting cast is of the finest and includes Irene Dalton, Frank Currier, Snitz Edwards and Lillian Drew. Jerome Storm was the director.

BIG GLASS BROKEN

One of the big panes of plate glass on the west side of the new Crist block was broken Monday afternoon when a hammer in the hands of one of the carpenters, Bartley Wilson, fell and slivered the glass. This is the second big pane broken accidentally in a week. The other pane was broken on the Main street side of the building when Mr. Crawford, the expert glass setter of the J. C. Coulson company, was placing the pane in the window frame.

The glass was not insured. The one on the Main street side was valued at $150 and the other was valued at $100.

Great Value of Redwood.

Redwood lumber is largely used on the Pacific coast, as it has great natural resistance to rot and fire. Heart redwood when placed in contact with the ground will remain in good condition for 25 years or more, whereas a great many other species rot out in a few years. The redwood heartwood is also able to repel the attacks of decay-producing fungi, because of the presence of tannin, oils and resins obnoxious to fungi.

OFFICIAL IS MAKING GOOD

Thad H. Brown, Secretary of State, Looks After Interests of People.

Various Reforms Have Been Worked Out and Economies Have Been Accomplished — Good Results Were Shown in Transmission of Returns.

It is pleasing to cast an eye in the way of a Republican who has measured up to the full requirements of his office. In reality this applies to every Republican who holds a position in the Capitol given him by virtue of the people's choice. But just now attention is particularly directed to Thad H. Brown, secretary of state. This is a most important place in the scheme of our government and it is essential to have a man of ample capacity occupying a post, so directly associated with the welfare of the people. Mr. Brown has made no incontinent of disappointment on the minds of those who elected him.

He came into office on the eighth of January last. Since then he has accomplished many things worth while, in addition to the prescribed duties of the office which include the administration of the election laws; filing and preserving the laws, as enacted by the general assembly; seeing that the rules governing corporations are not violated or held lightly; enforcing the law concerning automobile licenses and collecting millions of dollars annually in fees, which are given into the care of the state treasury.

These things require time and a prudent mind, if carefully done. They have been rightfully executed under the administration of Mr. Brown. Beyond the necessary requirements of his place he has done more. During the last session of the legislature a number of measures were introduced, as the outcome of recommendations he had made. These stood for the correction of ills in the code of election laws. Barring a few minor exceptions they were adopted by the general assembly. Some are now in effect; others, were vetoed by the governor. The latter will again be presented when the legislature meets reinforced with additional recommendations, which Mr. Brown is now drafting.

A very important reform brought about by the secretary was the law which speeds the return of elections and hastens their transmission to the people, thru the medium of the press. It does away with delays, heretofore of such unnecessary and therefore more provoking frequency. It is known as the "Bender-Spidel" bill and was the outcome of conferences between Secretary Brown and newspaper representatives. As a result the people of the state, can, in the future, know the outcome of elections the night they are held or the next morning, at the least.

Mr. Brown is studying economy. He is at work diligently on a plan to minimize expense in the conduct of the election machinery of the state, a reform as conspicuously needed, as it has been conspicuously absent. This has been particularly true in several primary elections where money, of no benefit either to the candidates or the public has been expended.

Due to the efforts of the secretary of state, in a large way, the Carpenter law was passed by the last legislature vetoed by the governor and then re-passed over his objections. This is going to save the taxpayers a goodly sum. It provides for the publishing of the biennial appropriation bill in a pamphlet, apart from the "year book" of laws, printed after the close of each biennial session of the general assembly. This is a very proper arrangement and one calculated to hold down the drain on the public purse.

The acceptance of applications for annual automobile license tags, the assigning of distinctive license numbers and the collection of the annual auto tax, have been simplified and standardized under his administration. It is now done by deputy registrars under bond in every county, instead of being compelled, thru stress of work, to depend upon private corporations, assistants in the distribution of tags and the collection of license fees. So rapid has been the growth of the automobile licensing department it will put a 24-hour a day service into operation.

It is no small task to issue papers of incorporation to new concerns for the conduct of business in the state. This comes under the direction of the secretary of state. People hardly realize the magnitude of this work. From June 8 to October 4 of this year the receipts of the corporation department reached the total of $1,003.

925.48 and new concerns were incorporated to the number of 3403. A very pleasing feature of the work has been the large volume of kindly letters received by Mr. Brown, sent him by attorneys, handling legal work in connection with the corporations seeking to be licensed, testifying to the satisfactory and courteous way in which their applications have been given attention.

It is all only another illustration of a Republican state official hewing close to the line for which he was elected, refusing to branch out on the side tracks and really making good.

First Visiting Cards.

The practice of using visiting cards has come down to us from sixteenth century Italy. Then Padua was attended very largely by students from Germany, with whom it was the custom when they left college to pay farewell visits to their professors. When these dignitaries were not at home to receive the personal token, the student left their names on slips of paper.

The Man.

Balzac left in manuscript a chapter which he called "Theorie de la Demarche," in which he says, "The look, the voice, the respiration and the attitude or walk are identical. But, as it has not been given to man the power to stand guard at once over these four different simultaneous expressions of his thought, watch that one which speaks out the truth, and you will know the whole man."—Life of Balzac.

ORONTES RIVER
MAKES HISTORY

Stream Has Always Played Important Role.

PEOPLE DIG LICORICE ROOT

"The Orontes river, in northern Syria, which citizens of Mecca claim as the northern boundary of the island of the Arabs, the native name for Arabia, has always played an important role in the theater of Asia where East meets West," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Juvenal, the great Roman satirist, uttered what may seem like a geographic untruth when he said that the waters of the Orontes overflowed into the Tiber," but many historians have claimed that the river was an important factor in bringing about the downfall of the Roman empire. Along this path made by Nature between the Mediterranean and the lands of the East the superstitions and corruption of Asia came to Rome, brought by the Roman legions, and Greek art and civilization, together with Roman law, flowed to the rising sun.

An Early Earthquake Theory.
"It has been said that the river derived its name from a man who built a bridge over it. After one of the great earthquakes in Roman times had changed the course of the river, the oracle declared that the bones of a man of colossal size found in the old river bed were those of Orontes, and on the ancient coins of Antioch, the most famous city which ever existed along its banks, the river is personified as a youth swimming at the feet of the female figure representing the city. The old name of the river was Typhon after that terrible mythological dragon buried under the mountains around Antioch whose frequent writhings and twistings were believed to be the cause of the numerous earthquakes along the river valley.

"The giant under the earth still turns and tosses and mutters and makes the earth tremble in the vicinity of Antioch. It is one of the few non-volcanic regions of the earth in which earthquakes occur.

"According to Syrians, the Orontes also is peopled by water-spirits, which are believed to be the authors of fertility. When the water of the river, which has been diverted into irrigation ditches, again is allowed to flow across the river bed, childless Syrian women wade out into the channel hoping for the embrace of the water-spirit in the oncoming rush of the stream.

Meanders Through Steppes.
"Rising down in the great springs of the Inter-Lebanon district, near the ancient city of Baalbek, the great river flows northward almost parallel to the Mediterranean coast, falling 2,000 feet through a rocky gorge. The great depression through which the river flows, traversing Syria from the Taurus mountains to the Sinai desert, has few outstanding physical features. It is made up mostly of broad plateaus of steppe land, rock and debris. The river widens out at Hamah into a rich district containing the sites of the ancient towns of Apamea and Larissa. At Jisr-al-Hadid, the river turns westward around the great plain of Antioch.

"Though in the main the river is un-navigable, its valley has for ages been a convenient highway for traffic from north to south. Roads from the north and northeast, from Damascus and Coele-Syria converge at Antioch, and along the depression and across the Sinai peninsula have passed armies bound to and from Egypt for hundreds of generations. Today the fleet-footed Arabian and the rocking camel are fast giving place to the invincible automobile and the motor lorry.

Its Source and Mouth Cities.

"No two cities in the world have had more romantic histories than those at its source and near its mouth. Baalbek, the ancient city of Baal, the sun-god, with its famous ruins of a temple made of veritable megaliths, stirs the imagination as does Antioch, which in its glorious days saw the horses of Ben-Hur crash past the chariot of the proud Roman, saw mighty Trajan, with fragments of his Roman army which he was to lead against the Parthians sheltering in its huge circus in the midst of the severe earthquake of 115 A. D., and watched with careless eye the lolling of the Roman legions in its beautiful grove of Daphne. "When the hot, malarial-breathing winds from the east blow across the valley of the Orontes, the inhabitants take to the mountains and plateaus where the climate is especially agreeable. For most of them it is convenient to do so, for excellent pasturage is found in various areas, and it is never difficult for these Bedouins to take up their tents and move all their household effects to pleasanter surroundings. No reliable statistics are obtainable upon the cattle in Syria, but handbooks say that the number in the Orontes valley is considerable. Apamea in the days of Antioch's glory was the home of the great national stud which boasted 30,000 mares and 300 stallions.

"A good many of the inhabitants have been lured by American dollars in digging licorice root on plantations where great wooden water-wheels have been lifting the Orontes into irrigation ditches in order that cough-syrup and plug-tobacco manufacturers may supply our demands."

Far-Seeing Youth.

Robert had been angry at James for several days and I was surprised to hear him call over to James and invite him to come and ride on his new sled. Later I questioned him as to his forgiveness of James and Robert explained: "Well, Bill told me Jim was going to have a party next week and I didn't want to lose out."—Exchange.

National Prosperity.

No country can endure long if its foundations are not laid deep in the material prosperity which comes from thrift, business energy and enterprise, from hard, unsparring effort in the fields of industrial activity; but neither was any nation ever yet truly great if it relied upon material prosperity alone.—Theodore Roosevelt.

HOW TO LOCATE ENGINE TROUBLES

Even experienced motorists find it hard sometimes to locate various engine troubles. This chart will help you do it. It is a compilation of all kinds of sounds emanating from beneath the hood and the cause of each. Keep this handy. It will shorten many a search for the source of some dangerous knock or pounding.

Sound.	Trouble.
Hissing	Cylinder release cock open; walls scored; head gasket loose; spark plug loose or broken.
Hissing or whistling	Air leak in manifold joints.
Hissing, back firing	Valve stems bent.
Knocking	Spark too far advanced; lower crankcase bolts loose.
Knock at high speed	Worn piston.
Knock when spark is advanced	Carbon in combustion chamber.
Short, metallic knock	Cylinder block loose.
Knock from overheat-
ing	Water jackets clogged.
Dull, metallic knock	Worn or loose piston pins.
Sharp knock	Loose connecting rod; tappet out of adjustment.
Heavy, metallic knock	Looseness or end play in main bearings.
Dull knock	Loose crankshaft bearings.
Clinking	Fan blades striking obstacles; broken fan hub bearings; valves loose or cracked; valve stems worn; timing gears loose or teeth worn.
Dull pound	Loose flywheel; loose crankcase; overheated cooling system, due to radiator leak, etc.
Grinding, squeaking	Oil level too low; pump obstructed.
Squeaking	Magneto or distributing bearings dry.
Blowing sound	Oil leaking through crankcase gaskets.
Back-firing	Broken or weak valve springs.
Misfiring	Spark plug gap too small.

MORE ATTENTION NEEDED FOR CAR

Breakdown Inevitable if Continuously Forced at Highest Possible Pressure.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

A car is like a human being. It can work moderately through a long life-time and only "grow old gracefully," but if continuously forced at the highest possible pressure a breakdown is inevitable sooner or later.

Avoid subjecting a car continuously to unreasonably heavy road shocks. Rushing over rough roads at high speed is bound to result in abnormal wear and tear. All body and running gear parts loosen up prematurely under such treatment and the damage from road rack is probably nearly quadrupled by doubling the speed.

Examples of Harshness.

Refrain from harshness in operation, of which the following are examples: Racing the engine; stepping on the throttle, to obtain maximum acceleration; jamming on the brakes brutally; forcing the gears together when they do not engage readily; letting in the clutch violently and skidding around curves.

Beware of heedlessness in operation, for it is this shortcoming that brings about the frozen radiator, the bearings that are burned out or cylinders that are scored from lack of oil, and the reverse gears that are stripped by trying to mesh them while a car is in motion, not to speak of all the damage caused by collisions.

Repair Defects Promptly.

The prompt correction of defects when they first develop and before their consequences have become serious, is another important consideration. If a loose connecting rod bearing is at once taken care of, when its hammering is first noticed, the repair outlay need not be large, but if repairs are neglected until the rod has broken loose and wrecked the crankcase and perhaps the whole cylinder block, the replacement expense will be staggering.

Let no motorist fail to realize that, in nine cases out of ten, it is imperfect lubrication that brings a car to the repair shop. Repair expense is nothing else than tribute exacted by the Demon Friction.

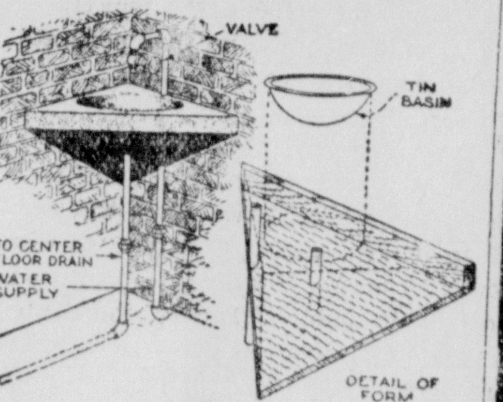

Motor Talk

"Keep cool," says the Fan.
"Retire early," says the Casting.
"Avoid friction," says the Bearing.
"Brighten up," says the Headlight.
"Cut out the noise," says the Muffler.
"Don't blow too much," says the Horn.
"Don't be a knocker," says the Cylinder.
"Be a good mixer," says the Carburetor.
"A quick turn over is what counts," says the Crank.
"One good turn deserves another," says the Starter.

HANDY GARAGE WASHBOWL

Built in Corner and Does Not Take Up Any Floor Space—Can Be Readily Made.

The drawing shows a concrete wash-bowl for use in garages. The bowl is built in a corner, as shown, so that it will not take any floor space. A number of holes are made in the wall at the point where the bowl is to be made, so that the concrete will be anchored securely. A wooden form is made as shown in the right-hand detail, two holes being drilled in it for the two pipes that are brought through the bowl as indicated; one of these is the water pipe, and is fitted at the top with two elbows, a nipple and a valve; the other pipe is the drain pipe, which runs under the floor to the sewer. An ordinary tin washpan is used as a form for the bowl. Several coats of heavy oil paint and two coats of white enamel are applied to the inside and top of the bowl, to waterproof it and make it smooth.

BLIND INVENTOR LIGHTS THE WAY

J. Banks Nicholson, Washington's blind inventor, has just perfected automobile headlights to greatly reduce traffic smashups and loss of life. He made his models by the touch system and has just put a machine on the street to demonstrate that a blind man cannot only reconcile himself to perpetual darkness, but can shed the light of his high beneficence on others. The invention consists of two headlights which turn automatically in the direction taken by the car, much after the fashion of the human eye. The lights are so tilted that they blind neither the pedestrian nor the autoist. Attached to the headlights are rear green lights, which are said to be more satisfactory than tail lights. Mr. Nicholson is shown in the photograph.

Opportunity Not to Be Missed.

My small boy thinks all babies are cupids with wings, sent from heaven. I want to see where you cut his wings off."—Exchange.

Society Will Give Play "Royal Spark"—
Election of Officers.

The Literary society of the high school will meet at the auditorium this evening at 7:30. This will be our second meeting. At the first meeting the following officers were elected for the year 1923-24: Russell Compton, president; Arnold Valentine vice president; William Goodchild, secretary; Glen Vanscoy, treasurer; Gardner Wilder, sergeant-at-arms.

Last year the society had success and put on quite a few numbers which were interesting but this year we wish to put on still better ones and by the looks of the program for Tuesday night we have made a good start.

Thru the efforts of Miss Reynolds a play will be given. This play is called the "Royal Spark" and by what we hear it doesn't deceive its name. The cast is as follows:

Flora Wheatly—A Widow
..... Hester Bentley
Dick Wheatly, Margy Wheatly, Her
Children Home from College.....
Glen Vanscoy, Genevieve Metzger
Estelle Norton Margy's Friend.....
..... Helen Mack
Theron Fletcher, Dick's Friend.....
..... George Hilder
Gretchen Maid at Wheatley's
..... Harriet Marfield
Fritz, Engaged to Gretchen
..... William Goodchild

There are several other numbers on the program which are equally good. Remember Tuesday evening and everybody be out for a good time is assured.

DAMAGE SUIT

Robert and Bessie Reed Ask $16,692 for Faulty Furnace Installation.

A $16,692 damage suit was filed Friday in the Ross county common pleas court by Robert and Bessie Reed against the Holland Furnace Co. The plaintiff's attorneys are Barton Walters, of this city and Frank Redfern of Adelphi.

The plaintiffs claim that a fire, which on December 15, 1921, totally destroyed their hotel, residence, grocery store room and pool room at Adelphi together with their personal property was due to the "negligent and wanton" manner in which the defendant company installed one of its furnaces. In addition the plaintiffs claim they were deprived of the use of said buildings for six months, meaning an additional loss of $600.

For all of which they claim a total damage of $16,692.

Hotel Stenographer
BY ROE FULKERSON

"I do not even believe that China men have celluloid fingernails," said the Hotel Stenographer.
"Huh?" asked the House Detective.
"I just said that one by one my delusions have failed, my superstitions have ceased to be convincing and the way the world is wagging, soon I will not believe there is any virtue in the left-hand foot of a rabbit, shot in a graveyard on a moonlight night by a cross-eyed dorkie." "As soon as I was old enough to want anything more expensive than a quarter doll and a 39 cent set of toy dishes, they let me know that Santa Claus, like a trained lion, simply isn't. From that time on I have seen my fondest hopes decay and all my illusions go blowie, as the poet says."

"I have quit picking up pins with their points turned toward me; I do not believe a horseshoe is good luck. The prejudice against loose horseshoes puncturing the tires of the flivver, has unhorsed the horse, as it were!" "I do not worry any more about walking under a ladder since they began to let painters down from the roof by a rope, like spiders, and four-leafed covers will not grow up thru concrete along the good roads we have everywhere."

"When we were kids we believed in fairies and gnomes and pixies but not the comic strips have put different ideas in our heads. We used to use rouge in secret, and now we paint and powder in public. I wish somebody would fool me about something pretty."

"What's the matter?" asked the House Detective.

"I just found out that a guy I've been going with, who told me he was in a bank, is a janitor. I thought I had me a cashier, at least."

HERE AND THERE

More than 400,000 employees of the postal department will seek an increase in salary at the coming session of congress, National President Edward Gainer of the letter carriers announced.

Nine persons were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the home of Daniel Rosso, an Italian farmer, on Anderson Hill, near Connelsville, Pa. The dead are Rosso, his wife and seven children.

Six-year-old girl was shot and fatally wounded when her father, Casimer Laskowski, police say, ran amuck in the home of his estranged wife, at Detroit.

Unrequited love led to the slaying of Martha Smith, 28, and the suicide of Emil Johnson at a roadhouse near Benton Harbor, Mich., local authorities said. Johnson shot the woman and then turned the gun on himself.

Twenty persons were killed and 77 injured during the hunting season just closed in New York state, according to a statement issued by the state conservation commission.

Two deaths were caused at Milwaukee by poison liquor.

Snow in Northern New York.
Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Winter showed its hand over the northeastern section of New York state and a number of towns were blanketed in snow that varied from six to 18 inches. Albany, Troy and Schenectady suffered an impairment of telephone and wire communications; Glens Falls registered a new November record of 10½ inches; Duaneburg reported 18 inches and Plattsburg was completely stormbound.

STOUTSVILLE MILL.

If you want good flour for bread bring your grist and come to the mill and get thirty-eight pounds of flour to the bushel or buy it from your grocers handled by nearly all the groceries in Circleville and country stores. Milled by J. E. Poynter, who made the Laurelville Special for years and as good a miller as there is in central Ohio. Flour tested by the Mid West laboratory, Columbus, and found first class in every respect. Bran and middlings and chop feed in reasonable amounts to farmer and dealers at all times; buyer of grains of all kind and hay and straw. Prices made to meet competition.

"The Store That Treats You Right"

Go Right Ahead and Pluck the Turkey, but Don't Let the Turkey Pluck You.

The man who is going to buy new clothes this week has, we believe, style in his eye—quality in his heart—and value in his head.

He wants to pluck a wonderful suit or coat, but he doesn't want to be plucked for a wonderful profit.

Not that we infer he would be unsafe anywhere else—but why go elsewhere when he is sure of finding exactly what he wants here?
